COLORADO LEGAL SERVICES

2008 ANNUAL REPORT
COLORADO LEGAL SERVICES

Colorado Legal Services provides meaningful access to high quality civil legal services, in the pursuit of justice for as many low income people throughout Colorado as possible. Colorado Legal Services, a Colorado non-profit corporation, is governed by a 27 member Board of Directors, 18 of whom are attorneys licensed to practice law in Colorado who are appointed by the State Bar Association and specialty bar associations and 9 of whom are individuals financially eligible to receive legal services from the program who are appointed by a variety of local human services and community agencies. The Legal Aid Society of Metropolitan Denver was founded in 1925 to provide free legal representation and counsel in civil matters to low income persons throughout the Denver metropolitan area and, since the early 1980's, in 11 rural mountain counties in Northwestern Colorado. On October 1, 1999, the Legal Aid Society of Metropolitan Denver combined with the other two federally funded civil legal services programs in Colorado, Pikes Peak/Arkansas River Legal Aid and Colorado Rural Legal Services, and is now a single statewide legal services program renamed Colorado Legal Services. Jonathan D. Asher is the Executive Director of Colorado Legal Services and has served as the Executive Director for over 28 years. Manuel Ramos is the Director of Advocacy, Molly Ryan and Maureen Terjak are the Co-Directors of Administration and Access and Billie Hall is the Controller of the program.

Colorado Legal Services receives funding from the Legal Services Corporation, the State of Colorado, Mile High United Way, Foothills United Way (Boulder and Broomfield Counties), several other local United Way agencies, the Denver Regional Council of Governments, and a number of other Area Agencies on Aging throughout the State, the Colorado Lawyer Trust Account Foundation, the Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado, charitable grants and contributions from a number of local bar associations, and a variety of cities and counties and judicial districts served statewide by the program. Colorado Legal Services accepts but does not solicit contributions from the public or from lawyers other than through the efforts of the Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado. All funds received by Colorado Legal Services are used to deliver legal services to the poor and elderly in greatest economic and social need. The audited financial statements of Colorado Legal Services reflect that in 2008, fully 78% of its resources were expended for the direct delivery of legal services, 21% of its resources were expended for management and general activities and less than 1% of its resources were expended for fundraising activities.

Colorado Legal Services coordinates its solicitation of contributions with the Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado. The Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado, which distributes all of its funds to Colorado Legal Services, conducts annual law firm solicitation and lawyer campaigns in the Denver metropolitan area, Colorado Springs, Boulder, Fort Collins and Durango and requests a contribution from other attorneys licensed to practice law in the State of Colorado. The Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado also solicits funds from various private foundations and the general public on behalf of Colorado Legal Services.

Colorado Legal Services provides its services through 15 offices located throughout the State. The administrative office is located just outside of downtown Denver. In order to qualify for legal assistance, an applicant for services must be determined to be financially eligible to be served by Colorado Legal Services, the requested services must fall within the program's substantive priorities and the program must have adequate resources to handle the matter. Colorado Legal Services staff, counting volunteer staff, provided more than 109,933 hours of legal services to eligible clients during 2008. Legal services provided to financially eligible clients included legal representation, legal advice, brief service and appropriate referrals. Priority is given to addressing the legal needs of poor people required to maintain the basic necessities of a decent life, including at least minimally adequate income, food, shelter, utilities and medical care, freedom from domestic violence and abuse, and the protection of individual rights of the elderly and those who are physically and mentally disabled. Services are provided in matters involving income maintenance and public benefits, housing and homelessness, consumer and finance, health, including the legal rights of the elderly and the physically and mentally disabled, and family and domestic relations, with particular emphasis on domestic violence and abuse. During 2008, the staff of Colorado Legal Services provided legal representation to clients in 1,700 cases. An additional 7,659 individuals received legal advice or brief legal service.

The Denver office includes specialty units which enable the program to more adequately meet current and emerging client legal needs. The current units specialize in the legal issues involving Consumer, Families and Children, Housing Rights and Homelessness, and Health and Elderly. A statewide Advocacy Support unit improves and supports the quality of legal services provided to clients represented by program staff throughout the entire State. Continuing assessment and evaluation of the legal needs of the poor is necessary to develop appropriate legal responses to client efforts to end welfare dependence and achieve lasting self sufficiency.

Attached to this narrative and made a part of the Annual Report are the 2008 case statistics for Colorado Legal Services, the 2008 Audit, the 2008 income and expense budget, current financial eligibility guidelines and a list of the Board of Directors of Colorado Legal Services.

2004 ANNUAL REPORT

COLORADO LEGAL SERVICES

A United Way

2004 ANNUAL REPORT
COLORADO LEGAL SERVICES

The Legal Aid Society of Metropolitan Denver was founded in 1925 to provide free legal representation and counsel in civil matters to low income persons throughout the Denver metropolitan area and since the early 1980's in 11 rural mountain counties in Northwestern Colorado. On October 1, 1999, the Legal Aid Society of Metropolitan Denver combined with the other two federally funded civil legal services programs in Colorado, Pikes Peak/Arkansas River Legal Aid and Colorado Rural Legal Services, and is now a single statewide legal services program renamed Colorado Legal Services. Colorado Legal Services, a Colorado non-profit corporation, is governed by a 27 member Board of Directors, 18 of whom are attorneys licensed to practice law in Colorado who are appointed by the State Bar Association and specialty bar associations and 9 of whom are individuals financially eligible to receive legal services from the program who are appointed by a variety of local human services and community agencies. Jonathan D. Asher is the Executive Director of Colorado Legal Services and previously served as the Executive Director of the Legal Aid Society of Metropolitan Denver for over 24 years. Manuel Ramos is the Director of Advocacy, Jerome Lemberger is the Director of Administration and Access and Greg Alston is the Controller of the program.

Colorado Legal Services receives funding from the Legal Services Corporation, the State of Colorado, Mile High United Way, Foothills United Way (Boulder and Broomfield Counties), several other local United Ways, the Denver Regional Council of Governments and a number of other Area Agencies on Aging throughout the State, the Colorado Lawyer Trust Account Foundation, the Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado and charitable grants and contributions from a number of local bar associations and a variety of cities and counties and judicial districts served statewide by the program. Colorado Legal Services accepts but does not solicit contributions from the public or from lawyers other than through the efforts of the Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado. All funds received by Colorado Legal Services are used to deliver legal services to the poor and elderly in greatest economic and social need. The audited financial statements of Colorado Legal Services reflect that in 2004 fully 83% of its resources were expended for the direct delivery of legal services, 16% of its resources were expended for management and general activities and 1% of its resources were expended for fundraising activities.

Colorado Legal Services coordinates its solicitation of contributions with the Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado. The Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado, which distributes all of its funds to Colorado Legal Services, conducts annual law firm solicitation and lawyer campaigns in the Denver metropolitan area, Colorado Springs, Boulder, Fort Collins and Durango and requests a contribution from other attorneys licensed to practice law in the State of Colorado. The Legal Aid Foundation of Colorado also solicits funds from various private foundations and the general public on behalf of Colorado Legal Services.

Colorado Legal Services provides its services through 15 offices throughout the State. The administrative office is located just outside of downtown Denver. In order to qualify for legal assistance, an applicant for services must be determined to be financially eligible to be served by Colorado Legal Services, the requested services must fall within the program's substantive priorities and the program must have adequate resources to handle the matter. Colorado Legal Services staff, counting volunteer staff, provided more than 121,489 hours of legal services to eligible clients during 2004. Legal services provided to financially eligible clients included actual representation, legal advice, brief service and appropriate referrals.

Priority is given to dealing with the legal aspects of the efforts of poor people to maintain the basic necessities of a decent life, including at least minimally adequate income, food, shelter, utilities and medical care, freedom from domestic violence and abuse, and the protection of individual rights of the elderly and physically and mentally disabled. Services are provided in matters involving income maintenance and public benefits, housing and homelessness, consumer and finance, health, including the legal rights of the elderly and the physically and mentally disabled, and family and domestic relations, with particular emphasis on domestic violence and abuse. During 2004, the staff of Colorado Legal Services represented clients in 1,892 cases. An additional 4,377 individuals received legal advice or brief legal service.

The Denver office includes specialty units to enable the program to more adequately meet current and emerging client legal needs. The current units specialize in the legal problems of Family and Children, Housing Rights and Homelessness, and Health and Elderly. A Support and Advocacy Support System Unit was created to improve and support the quality of legal services provided to clients represented by program staff throughout the entire State. Continuing assessment and evaluation of the legal needs of the poor is necessary to develop appropriate legal responses to client efforts to end welfare dependence and achieve lasting self sufficiency.
